From the heights of Anacapri, terraced olive groves cascade down to the sea, and there, just a stone's throw from Emperor Tiberius's summer retreat, stands Villa Tiberio, the ideal island retreat. Villa Tiberio is ensconced in an acre of luxuriant, terraced gardens, surrounded by tropical flowers and has a sensational, circular pool.

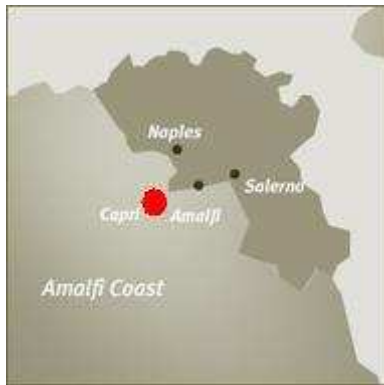

From Villa Tiberio's terraces you can enjoy stunning views of Capri's western coast and its deep blue waters. Owned by a German aristocrat, this villa is the perfect venue for those seeking total relaxation – soft sea breezes and the gentle sounds and scents of lemon trees wafting through the air create a very special atmosphere. Villa Tiberio was built in 1950 in honour of the mother of the original owner, Princess Mafalda, daughter of King Victor Emmanuel III. Recently renovated, Villa Tiberio maintains its original splendour while its interiors have recently been enriched with tastefully selected materials and furnishings.

Technical description:

Access to the Villa is gained by walking across the garden from the private car park. From the main entrance, you enter the dining room while to the left a living room leads to the garden and the pool. Further on, there is a large, fully equipped modern kitchen behind which you will find one small single bedroom with bathroom and bathtub originally built for the housemaid. On the right of the dining room, a doorway leads to a twin bedroom with en-suite bathroom with shower. On the same side as the large dining room, another door opens into a second twin bedroom adjacent to a bathroom with bathtub. A double bedroom with en-suite bathroom with shower completes the ground floor.

The first and ground floors are linked by an elegantly curved staircase. The first floor contains a double bedroom with access to the terrace and a bathroom with bathtub. There is also a cosy study with a fireplace and large windows overlooking the sea. A glass door gives access to the terrace from where the swimming-pool area can be reached down a few steps.
